Ali Rejoices in His Title

KINSHASA, Zaire, Oct 30.—Now that Mu-hammad Ali has regained the heavyweight title that was taken away from him seven years ago, he wants time to play with it.

After knocking out George Foreman in the eighth round here this morning, All said. "They took my title away unjustly and I want to hold on to it for a few months." The new champion, whose crown was removed in 1967 before a draft-evasion conviction which was eventually overruled by the U.S. Supreme Court, said that he may retire next year without ever fighting again, but that $10 million may change that decision.

"Governments are looking for me now, not promoters." All said at his villa by the Zaire River five hours after he regained the title he first won 10 years 200. He disclosed that he had recently received an offer from a government official of a country he refused to name, offering him $10 million to give Foreman a rematch, or to meet former titleholder Joe Frazier.

For now. Ali said, "I don't want to fight nobody. I seriously want to retire, but not right now. I want to see my name there for a while.
I got a big decision to make. I might stop where I'm at and forget the money. I will have to talk to Elijah Muhammad [leader of the Black Muslims] first. I've got things to do in America.

Thieu Fires 3 Corps Commanders

SAIGON, Oct. 30 (UPI),-President Nguyen Van Thieu demoted three top generals and received the resignation of six cabinet ministers, in bowing to public pressure for an end to corruption and incompetence, government sources said today,

The sources said Mr. Thieu ordered the firing of three of the army's four corps commanders, all three-star generals. They were given posts normally filled by one-star officers.

They said that six cabinet members, including the foreign affairs minister, quit, raising to 10 the number of cabinet officials who bave resigned in the past

The sources said Mr. Thieu ordered the shake-up in an attempt to pacify opponents demanding his resignation on charges of corruption, abuse of power and failure to end the war. Blow for President

The resignation of Foreign Minister Vuong Van Bac, who had been hard at work trying to win diplomatic support for the government, was a hard blow for

Mr. Thieu. The sources said other cabinet members submitting their resignations were Education Minister Ngo Khac Tinh, a relative of Mr. Thieu and the ministers of social welfare, veterans affairs, labor and public works.

Military sources said that Lt. Gen. Nguyen Vinh Nghi, commander of the IV Corps in the Mekong Delta, was sent to lead an infantry training center at

Meanwhile, five thousand Catholics marched in a torchlight parade tonight as street demonstrations against Gen. Thieu mounted.

They carried torches and banners and shouted slogans demanding an end to corruption. An effigy labeled "corruption," with cigar stuck in its mouth, swung from a sound truck. Most of the marchers were young be-tween 16 and 25 years old. The police did not intervene. There was no violence.

Saigon authorities have imposed a virtual 24-hour curfew over a hundred blocks in the center of the city, sending all available policemen to the barricades to stop demonstrators tomorrow.

The secret police raided a Vietnamese press club shortly after the curiew and arrested up to 50 newsmen and several oppotition deputies who were preparing for an anti-government demonstration against censorship.

A fight broke out and several of the newsmen and at least one deputy were beaten and taken away in jeeps and trucks.

Bank Group to Lend Pan Am Huge Sums to Cover Losses

NEW YORK, Oct. 80 (AP-DJ). -Banks have agreed to lend large sums to Pan American World Airways to cover expected operating losses during the next six months. Some sources have estimated that Pan Am needs about $150 million for the winter months to tide it over until the tourist season begins in the spring.

The decision to grant loans to meet payroll and other operating expenses averted for the time eing the threat of bankruptcy proceedings for Pan Am. William Seawell, Pan Am chairman and president, said earlier this month that negotiations then under way with the banks were crucial to the airline's existence. Befused last month to subsidize the airline directly, "there isn't any alternative" to the bank loans.

he said. The agreement was confirmed by bank officials and sources close to Pan Am, although a spokes man for the airline declined to comment. Details of the loan arrangement, including interest rates, conditions and timing, were expected to be announced soon.

U.S. Is Cutting World Food-Aid Programs

By H. J. Maidenberg

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (NYT).-When World War II ended, Washington embarked on an unusual and far-reaching program to feed millions of hungry persons overseas, most of whom paid little or nothing for the basic foodstuffs they received.

Now, with even greater numbers in desperate need of food, Washington is quietly winding down its so-called "Food for Peace" programs.

One such program has already ended. There were no shipments of powdered milk, upon which millions of children depended. during the fiscal year that ended

Lester Brown, a food expert at the Overseas Development observed in Washington recently that, in 1972, about 90 million of the world's poorest people depended on food received from these programs.

20 Million Persons

"An estimated 20 million nutritionally vulnerable people have been cut off from these programs in the past year," he said In addition, many millions are confronted with costly food bills they cannot afford. Shamsher Singh, chief of the Commodity Division of the World Bank, said the other day: "The poor countries have had their energy bill raised by $10

Court Quashes Case Of Notaire in France

PARIS. Oct. 80 (AP) .- The Paris Appeals Court today directed that murder charges be withdrawn against a provincial notairs and his wife in a case that had stirred passion in France.

After Brigitte Dewevre, 16, was found slain near her home in Bruay-en-Artois April 5, 1972, Pierre Leroy was charged with the killing and held in prison for three months during the investigation. Monique Mayeur, Mr. Leroy's fiancee at the time and now his wife, was later charged with complicity and held for 18 days. A year after Brigitte's body was found, a friend, a boy of 16, identified only as Jean-Pierre, admitted the murder. Although he has retracted many of the statements made to the police, he is still charged with the slaying.

minimum imported food bill equals that unobtainable sum. Obviously, their situation is untenable even in the short term."

It was obvious to the many commodity specialists interviewed in recent weeks that producers of basic foodstuffs are attempting to use their surpluses to pay for vastly increased energy bills. That is a reason, the experts pointed out, that prices of such key foodstuffs as grain, soybeans, and sugar have recently risen almost as much as

Surplus Tonnage

Another reason is that the current tonnages of surplus foods, while they equal those in the years immediately after World War II, must now feed far greater numbers of persons.

The use of food surpluses as an economic weapon began during the cold war, after World War II. During World War II the United States sent huge amounts of food to its allies, regardless of political ideology.

Albania Purges Deputy Premier In Rift on Policy

VIENNA, Oct. 30 (AP) .-Albanian Premier Mehmed Shehn said today that he has dismissed Deputy Premier and Defense Minister Bekir Balluku. Mr. Balluku reportedly lost favor with Enver Hoxha, leader of the ruling Communist party, in a dispute over Albania's attitude toward the Soviet Union.

Albania is China's chief ally in Eastern Europe. Following the Peking line, Mr. Hoxha denounces both the United States and the Soviet Union. But Mr. Balluku several months ago said in a speech that one of the superpowers is more dangerous than the other, implying that Albania should be more of Washington than have circulated in neighboring Yugoslavia that the speech led to clashes between Mr. Balluku and Mr. Hoxha. Mr. Balluku's ouster was the first major purge in the Albanian leadership in some time. It reduced the number of deputy premiers to three with Spiro Carcani now listed as first deputy expanded its food shipments to relieve hunger in ravaged parts of Asia and Europe not only for humanitarian reasons but also to prevent those regions from leaning toward Communism.

According to government officials involved in that effort, food played a vital role in the Marshall Plan, the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration and other programs that were begun in the late

Meanwhile, the huge handouts of foodstuffs provided a vital support for American agriculture, which had been geared for huge production during the war,

Productive Power

So great was the productive power of the U.S. farmers that, the end of the Korean War 1953, the United States faced a large surplus of food each year. So did Argentina, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and other countries that had increased production to help feed the world during World War II.

To cope with domestic crop surpluses and increasing foreign competition, Washington strengthened its tariff barriers on imported food and, in 1954, swept many relief programs into the Agricultural Trade Develop-ment and Assistance Act (Public Law 480), known as the "Food for Peace" program.

Under Title I of the program, foodstuffs were shipped to Amer-ica's political allies under extremely attractive terms. The recipient country usually paid in local currency or over a period of up to 40 years at very low interest rates.

Washington sid officials point out that the large sums amassed their food loans were often used in the recipient countries for improving health, communications, and educational systems, all of which also eventually helped to increase the demand for food.

Given Away

American surplus food was also riven away under Title II of Pub-Law 480, and accounted for roughly half the $1 billion to $1.5 billion a year involved in the overall plan.

The bulk of U.S. surpluses were erased by Moscow's purchase of 19 million metric tons of grain and sovbeans here and 11 million tons elsewhere in 1972 because of a poor Soviet crop.

The analysts said that the King may be biding his time and waiting to show the Arab leaders that the decision will not work.

The King evidently realized that he had little chance to reverse the decision of the Arab leaders and that, if he walked out and refused to accept the decision, he would be isolated within the Arab world, the analysis said. Therefore, they added, the King

Just this week, Mike Mansfield of Montana, the Senate Demo-cratic leader, dismissed Mr. Ford's campaign charges as politically Asked on the television show, "Face the Nation," whether he felt that Mr. Ford was worsening the division between the executive and legislative branches by his campaign speeches, Sen Mans-field replied:

"Oh, no. I think what the President is doing, we have to take in stride. If we had a Democrat in there, he'd be doing the same very likely, and the Presi-dent hasn't gotten personal."

Mr. Ford himself used much the same rationale last spring when-after a speech in which he accused "big labor" of trying to buy an Ohio special election-he was asked if that might not hurt his relations with labor leaders such as George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO.

Not at all, the then-Vice-President replied confidently. Mr. Meany, he said, understood politics and why it was sometimes cessary to use such rhetoric.

The championing of the new President by the two Democratic leaders in Coogress is not univer-sally shared by all congressional Democrats, particularly the younger liberals

For instance, Rep. Michael Har-rington, D-Mass., said recently that Mr. Ford's performance to date as President "has confirmed exactly what I thought all along."

Testifying against Mr. Ford's confirmation to be Vice-President last fall, Mr. Harrington had said that be felt that the nominee lacked "a demonstrated capacity for leadership. Honesty and decency are not enough."

Mr. Ford scored points with Congress when he became the first chief executive in more than a century to testify before a congressional subcommittee, which was inquiring into his pardon of Mr. Nixon, He has also set aside several bours a week to confer privately with any member of Congress who wants to talk over problems.

FORD GOES HOME-President Ford (far right at lectern) addressing a Grand Rapids, throughout the body suddenly threatens to become inadequate to maintain life. It is the event that suddenly happened to former president Richard Nixon yesterday afternoon.

What caused it? Surgeons here, reading Dr. John

Lungren's brief bulketin and description of the operation, sketched this probable sequence: Mr. Nixon had been getting sizable doses of the powerful antiblood-clotting drug heparin, to combat his dangerous thrombophlebitis—a vein inflammation.

When it became necessary to operate on him because new clots were still forming and might reach his lungs or heart, Mr. Nixon's surgeons apparently could not wait the usual 48 hours before any surgery. That would have provided enough time for the heaviest doses of heparin to wear off, to avoid the risk of the patient's bleeding to death as a result of the surgery.

A patient in shock is pale, nentally confused and sweating, although his skin feels cold and . clammy to the touch. And doctors monitoring the vital signs find blood pressure below normal, rapid pulse, and the kidneys relessing less urine than they should

At the same time, the heartwhich the body depends on to pump nourishing blood to the tises—loses its efficiency. Its job is further complicated by the fact that, when shock occurs, some veins and arteries and their smaller branches—capillaries and arterioles are oversupplied with blood while others do not get

In the process, the delicate halance of forces that ordinarily instantaneously changing physiological needs is thrown out of kilter.

Retroperitoneal Bleeding' The cause of the serious com plications," Dr. Lungren said was in all probability due to some retroperitoneal bleeding secondary to anti-coagulati-r therapy.

In short, Mr. Nixon was bleeding from the rear (or "retro" section) of the abdominal cavity behind the blood vessels and intestines, in the space between the intestines and the abdominal wall (or peritoneum). The bleeding, said Dr. Karel Absolon, chief of surgery at the Washington Hospital Center, probably came from the small blood vessels dissected to reach the major vessel on which Mr. Nixon's surgeons operated. Such vessels are always either tied i I or cauterized or otherwise closed to prevent bleeding. But with the presence heparin, "they probably cozed and cozed until the bleeding was just too much," Dr. Absolon said.

. The surgeons also wanted to maintain some heparinization

The survey was conducted two. years ago with approximately 300 students chosen from the 11,500 undergraduates at the Thaca, N.Y. coeducational school. Living together was defined in the survey as having shared a bed or bedroom with a single person of the opposite sex for four or more nights a week for at least three consecutive months.

"The thing I was most concerned about was the fact that most of the students didn't want to discuss their relationship with their parents," Dr. Macklin said in a telephone interview. "Their thinking was that their parents couldn't handle the problem."

To find what parents of Cornell students thought about unmarried persons living together, Dr. Macklin said she did a pilot study last winter with parents of 75 third-year students.

"About two-thirds of the parents thought no one should live together before marriage," Dr. Macklin said. "Not one single parent would recommend that

Smoke is dirty - but at least it's obvious and fairly local. The more dangerous air pollutants are invisible and sometimes you cannot smell them either. Being gases, like the air itself, they travel with it over great distances. Country air may be laden with them. Before you can deal with them you have to know what they are and where they come from. And that, because of their wide dispersion, means monitoring their concentrations over hundreds of square miles. We have set up, for the Netherlands Government, such a monitoring network covering the whole of Holland. Such a network is not merely a large number of monitors dotted all over the country. What the Netherlands Government was looking for, and what it found in Philips, Moreover, pollutants are often valuable materials going to waste – as indeed is the water that carries them.

Philips have devised automatic purification plants capable of recovering a large number of pollutants and rendering the water fit for recirculation. This plant built for an Italian company is one of them.

Mr. Rockefeller's Finances

As the details of Nelson Rockefeller's finances continue to pour out, it becomes increasingly important to keep in mind what this exercise in high finance and the tax laws is all about, Mr. Rockefeller is not disclosing his financial transactions simply to let the rest of us admire their size and scope. Nor is he spreading out this information in order to satisfy the spreading curiosity about how a rich man gets and spends his money. He has opened his private financial records because he wants to persuade Congress and the public that he is honest, truthful and ethical and because he believes that neither the size of his fortune nor the way he has used it should be an impediment to his confirmation as vice-president.

We bring this up because it seems to us that the relevance of Mr. Rockefeller's disclosures to the issue before Congress is being obscured by fascination with the details of those disclosures and confusion about the meaning of some of them. Take, for example, the fact that Mr. Rockefeller has agreed to pay $903,712 in back taxes to the federal government. That is interesting and somewhat mind-boggling but, without more, it is not relevant to whether or not Mr. Rockefeller should be confirmed as vice-president. What the Internal Revenue Service audit of Mr. Rockefeller's tax returns for the last five years has laid bare is not fraud but disagreements between the IRS and Mr. Rockefeller (or his tax lawyers) about the deductibility of certain expenditures and the handling of certain assets. Those disagreements are commonplace between the IRS and big taxpayers, be they individual or corporate, and they often are settled in court, simply because they involve questions about certain parts of the tax laws that have never been raised before. There is no suggestion that Mr. Rockefeller failed to report income that he actually received (as one recent vice-president did) or that he created phony deductions. So far as we know, no one has even intimated that there is anything dishonest about the tax returns he signed.

Similarly, the fact that Mr. Rockefeller deducted as a gift to the State of New York the $348,176 he spent improving the executive mansion in Albany is interesting but, without more, irrelevant to the question pending before Congress. There is no suggestion that he permitted public money to be spent to increase the value of his personal property (as one recent president did). Instead, he spent his money to increase the value of publicly owned property and then took a tax deduction for it. The economic impact of what he did was to transfer money from his bank account to real estate owned by the people of New York, Part (but not all) of this money would otherwise have gone to the federal Treasury. Unless there was some underhanded dealing with contractors or others and no one has suggested such a thing-there is nothing illegal or corrupt about what he did.

It is, of course, the size of Mr. Rockefeller's fortune that has made his tax returns so fascinating. It is not often that the American people have a chance to examine the affairs of a man who is now paying in back taxes more money than the average citzen earns in a lifetime. So it may be useful to put the back tax figure in perspective. The IRS assessment against Mr. Rockefeller, covering five years, represents the same proportion of his income that an assessment of $10,000, covering five years, would represent in relation to the income of an average con-

In the long run, it may be that the size of Mr. Rockefeller's fortune will be the stumbling block on his road to the vicepresidency. As we have suggested before, Congress needs to make sure Mr. Rockefeller fully understands how money can be misused without its being put to illegal or immoral purposes This, it seems to us, is the real question raised by the gifts Mr. Rockefeller has made to people who are or who have been in public office. It should provide the principal focus for the two congressional committees once they get back to town and turn to what should be their first item of business. Mr. Rockefeller's income tax returns, in other words, ought to be of only passing interest unless there are some major aspects of them that have not yet been revealed. There is nothing that has yet appeared concerning those returns that raises questions about his fitness for high public

Continuity in Bonn

At a time of considerable instability in the democratic countries of Europe, even state and local elections take on heightened interest. There was unusual curiosity in European Community and NATO capitals about the effect of last weekend's state elections in Bavaria and Hesse on Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's five-month-old West German

Schmidt's Social Democrats lost ground in both states, giving up their leading position in Hesse to the Christian Democratic Union for the first time since creation of the Federal Republic. His Free Democratic partner was also set back in Hesse and made no gain in Bavaria. The big winner was Franz-Josef Strauss, whose Christian Social Union in Bavaria polled a record 62 per

If these results affect national policies at all, changes are unlikely before the federal elections of 1976. In response to Strauss's assertion that the Social Democrats lost votes because of Bonn's policy of détente with the Soviet bloc, Schmidt blithely flew off to Moscow on schedule with Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher for talks with Soviet leaders about economic relations and the problems of West Berlin. Nor will the election reverses curtail the role of strong leadership Schmidt has exerted in the Common Market and especially his drive for an overhaul of the disjointed common agricultural policy. His long-run prospects have not been damaged irreparably by two state elections.

Although West Germany has a parliamentary system. The candidates for chancello count for a great deal in federal elections. The Christian Union parties are still in turmoll about the choice of a candidate to oppose Schmidt in 1976. His decisive victory in Bavaria will give Strauss more influence in the selection process, though he almost certainly cannot get the nomination for himself; and his role as kingmaker is more likely to be divisive than unifying.

It is far too early to count out Schmidt: and continuity is certain in any conceivable circumstances to characterize most of West Germany's policies toward the European Community, NATO, and East-West détente.

International Opinion

There were no real surprises in the Queen's Speech. Normally, when a government presents its immediate program after an election victory, there is some interest in the detail of how it will immediately interpret its manifesto in terms of parliamentary action. On this occasion, however, the government has been producing the policies to which it now gives priority since February, in the form of white papers and consultative documents

It is without question a left-wing course on which Mr. Wilson intends to lead the country. What is more, despite his slim overall majority on paper, the Prime Minister probably has the votes to introduce most of what was promised. For on most of the individual items, some elements of the non-Conservative opposition are likely to vote with Labor.

Some of the items for nationalization in the already announced Labor program, notably the proposal to take ports, road haulage and the construction industry into public ownership, did not feature in the submitted list. It still seems, however, that these industries are part of Labor plans for a later stage of this Parliament. They are, therefore, left in the unsatisfactory position of having a great cloud of doubt over their futures. It is not a satisfactory position. -From the Times (London),

Mideast Setback

King Hussein's defeat by the Palestinian Liberation Organization at the Arab summit meeting in Rabat is a huge impediment to progress toward peace at a time when nerves were already becoming dangerously frayed. In place of King Hussein, who was already deeply involved in factual negotiations with Israel for a modus vivendi including restoration of part of the West Bank, authority is now transferred to Yassir Arafat, a guerrilla and terrorist leader committed to Israel's destruction and to no negotlations with the Jewish state.

Israel likewise rejects negotiations with Arafat. If Yassir Arafat, now recognized by the UN, can respond to his enhanced prestige by giving evidence of serious responsibility. Israel might become less adamant against him. No one-including Russia and its new favorite. Syria, whom it has armed to the teeth, should have any illusions about the wider dangers of a new war in which both sides would use long-range missiles. -From the Daily Telegraph (London).

WASHINGTON.—The hobgoblin of this year's elections is that the Democrats want a massive victory in the House and Senate races so that they can dominate President Ford and override his vetoes, but this is Halloween talk rather than practical politics. Even if Democrats added another 35 seats to their present House majority of 248-187, they would still fall short of the 291 needed to create the vetoproof Congress Ford is campaigning against. And this assumes that every Democrat in the House would vote the party line, which didn't happen even in the days of Franklin Roosevelt's lopsided

It is true that the Democrats are a greedy bunch and would take a landslide victory if they could get it, but even House Speaker Carl Albert of Oklahoma doesn't want to unbalance the system and knows from experience that the larger the Democratic majority the harder it is for him to control their votes.

Veto Issue

The Constitution insisted on a two-thirds vote of both the House and the Senate to override a presidential veto precisely becar the Founding Fathers intended to make such votes extremely difficult, and in general the Congress has been faithful to this principle, regardless of the party balance.

Even in 1973, when President Nixon's popularity was falling fast, the Congress was able to override only one of his nine 73 vetoes (limiting his war-making nowers), and of the 37 vetoes he cast from early 1969 until the end of 1973, only five were over-

In practical political terms, the Democrats are less interested in boosting their present majorities in the House and Senate than they are in getting control of the machinery and patronage of the governorships in the states with the most electoral votes. They are not as eager for House and of the state houses that will help them in the presidential playoffs of 1976.

Their main objective is not to override Ford's vetoes but to ride the Republicans out of the White House, which the GOP has oc-cupied for the last two terms. A spectacular Democratic victory in the House and Senate next week, followed by defiance of presidential vetoes in the next two years, could easily produce a reaction in 1976.

The Economy

The economy is still likely to be the major issue in the next presidential election. It is the issue that has kept the Democrate in the presidency for 28 out of the last 44 years, but it is not likely to help them if they cripple Ford by overriding one veto after

Besides, if the Democrats win by an extravagant margin, their leaders in the House would have to consider another disadvantage: The possibility that a lot of new young Democratic upstarts might. challenge the present leadership and join with those who would prefer a different speaker.

Accordingly, talk of a one-party system is both bad politics an bad history. The trend usually goes against the president's party midyear election es, but in the last six midvear elections, the average House gain of the "out" party has been only 26 seats, and even much larger gains have not always assured victory for the outs at the next presidential elec-

NEW YORK.—Not everything not likely to be supplemed from the ranks of superpowers, what-ever happens. But Mexico's perhappening these days is bad, Into the arcane science of geofectly respectable 20-billion-barrel politics is creeping a long-term trend that could even be considered benign, a change in the of the heralded North Ses discoveries or the oil in the Alaskan North Sieper fields, and assure Mexico's status as at least a big list of factors that add up to

For almost 30 years now, the sential ingredient for global status as a "power" has been the nuclear bomb. With it, a country has been in the club; without it, governments have had to rely on an ally to grant guest privileges or at least to spread a protective umbrella to compensate for lesser status. A whole generation of geopolitical thinkers was educated on the map weighted for the nuclear powers. Geopolitics has been the 20th century's dismal science, as economics was for the 19th. It gauged its development by a minute hand hovering toward the midnight of nuclear holocaust. The balance of power was a balance of mutual terror. The nuclear measure is certainly not as outmoded as, say, extent of empire in ranking national power, but there is obviously a new symbol of status in the mational power game: oil. The longtime outs have formed their own club, one in which membership turns out to be highly destrable People no longer amirk when the Shah of Iran declares his intent to make Tehran the Paris of a tricontinental hub. American are rushing to study Arabic with as much gusto as they took up Russian after Sputnik.

Mexico's Role

The latest beneficiary of the new geopolitics is Mexico, so long shielded from strategic view by the glare of the United States Without accurate polling data, it that more people in the United States have set out to learn to pronounce the name of the President of Mexico (eh-cheh-veh-REE-yeh) in one month than in the entire previous history of the Mexican Republic.

When news of the Mexican oil discoveries reached Washington a couple of months ago, son people thought the Gulf of Mexico could turn into snother Persian Gulf. That seems wildly enthusiastic; with oil reserves of sometiming like 350 billion barrels, the states along the Persian Gulf are bilities for producing energy. The passing from a nuclear age into an oil age in geopolitics if it really happens that way will turally not eliminate the constants of history, the tensions and national rivairies, the threats and realities of war. Almost every day, Britain's troubled economy staggers from another body blow. In his first speech after his successful hid for re-election, Prime Minister Harold Wilson warned his countrymen that they confront "the most formidable" peacetime challenge in their lives.

Virulent Force

Bankers, industrialists, union officials and economists agree that Wilson was not exaggerating. The "stagflation" that has hit all non-Communist industrial nations has struck here with an specially virgient force. The broad indicators of economic activity add up to an almost universally gloomy picture. Retail prices are 17.1 per cent above a year ago and the gap widens almost every month. Total output is stagnant, with secondquarter production of goods and ervices this year about 12 per cent below the pace in the first three months of 1973. Unamployment creeps up slowly. It took a slight dip in October, but still stands at 643,800, or 2.8 per cent of the labor force as it is measured here. Exports cannot match the sharply increased bill for oil and other imported commodities, and the debt for overseas trade is running at an enormous yearly rate of $10 billion. The stock market has suffered a slide steeper than in the depths of the 1939s depression. The Financial Times index of industrial shares has phinged more than 60 per cent since the beginning of last year and companies will not go to the stock market to raise new capital. If firms stick to their present plans, crucial inmachinery will fall 8 per cent in the last six months of 1974.

Unsurprisingly, Britons are poorer. Real disposable personal the buying power of pay and other income sources after taxes are subtracted—was down nearly 4 per cent in the spring from the level reached a year danger will produce policies enabling Britain to pull through the world recession without destroying the nation's social fabric. For all its militancy, the labor force still regards itself as part of the social order. Even the few. This is hardly a rule for susterity. But by last month hourly pay for workers was already 20.5 per cent above a year ago and had been olimbing steadily from the 13.5 per cent level reached in March None of this inspires any confidence that the "contract" will be honored. Economists in the City as well as in universities are aviaced that Wilson will eventually have to impose mandatory curbs on pay. The government and the unions, however, insist there is no plausible alternative to voluntary restraint. This amounts to an admission that tough unions will break any legislated restraint, just as the coal miners did to bring down Edward Heath's Conservative government

The TUC itself has mounted a powerful propagands drive in support of wage restraint. It has enlisted some unexpected allies They include the left-wing milt. tant Jack Jones, general secretary of the Transport and General Workers Union, Britain's largest with 1.8 million mem-

In addition, taxes on firms were increased last March and they pay the higher levies on fictional profits. For example:

Mearly every manufactures, and retailer shows big paper profits because rising prices have sharply increased the value of their inventories—the materials, parts and finished products in warehouses and on shelves. Companies pay taxes on these "profits" even though they must replenish depleted inventories at the new and higher prices.

The CBI argues that British industry needs at once $7 billion just to finance its planned and shrunken investment in machinery and inventories. Although experts quarrel over the figure both ends of the political spectrum, the TUC as well as the CBI, agree that the pressure o. the "doomsday machine" must be relaxed

Two Approaches

Wilson's cabinet is wrestlin with two rival approaches to th problem, each reflecting the com peting ideologies in the govern ment. The Labor party is com mitted to creating a Nation; Enterprise Board under Anthon | Benn, the minister for trade. H is a hero to the left and an ognerallilli for the business community. Stalin's Orders The collectivization of agricul ture, carried out under Stalin's orders after World War II, has long been an emotional issue in Lithuania, which was incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940.

In the early years, thousands of Lithuanians took to the woods and opposed the Soviet government, which, terming them bandits, sent thousands off to Sibe ria, Kazakhstan and other distant regions. In more recent years, the controversy has cooled, but resistance smolders.

Such writers as Jonas Maciukevicius, who ran a short story on the countryside last November in Literatura Ir Menas, of Vilna have been criticized in the party press for glorifying rural values and old farmsteads. This month the noted poet Marcelijus Martinaitis, writing in the October issue of Kulturos Barai, of Vilna, seemed to accept some form of rural migration as inevitable but indirectly challenged the formula of state and collective farms.

Told How Wines Were Upgraded

BORDEAUX. Oct. 30 (AP).-The court hearing the Bordeaux wine fraud case was told today how the 18 defendants allegedly falsified labels on wine cargoes and sometimes used illegal chemical processes to change the nature of the wine.

One of the charges described was that trucks left a warehouse with a load of wine as mentioned on the trucks' papers, stopped at another warehouse where the papers were changed to upgrade the wine, but where the wine was not unloaded, then returned to the original point. The cargo was thus certified to be a much higher grade wine than it actually was.

Pierre Bert, a wine broker who is one of the central figures in the case, has admitted his part in the frauds.

The court told Mr. Bert that it was surprised at the role played by truck drivers in such cases. The defendant dismissed this as a minor detail, saying: There is always a way to fix it

New Canadian Novels Raise Specter of U.S. Domination By William Borders

MONTREAL, Oct. 30 (NYT).— "The Americans look on our resources as being their own," the commanding general of Canada's armed forces tells his men just before a crucial battle in "Exzoneration," a popular new Canadian novel. "They look on us as being weak-kneed, gray-faced people, and they see our country as a colony of the Stran."

Soon after the general's speech, U.S. Air Force fighter squadrons streak in from the south, launching an invasion designed to make Canada part of the United States, and the fight is on.

"Exxoneration," by Richard Rohmer, is one of half-a-dozen futuristic new novels dealing with various aspects of the American domination of Canada, which has long been a subject of Canadian resentment, but seldom the subject of such a simultaneous outpouring of fiction.

Fear Over Lisbon Causes Canceling NATO A-Talks

BRUSSELS, Oct. 30 (IET).— The next meeting of NATO's nuclear planning group to take place in Rome Nov. 7-8, has been postponed indefinitely because of U.S. fears about the reliability of the regime in Portugal in which Communists hold leading posts that concern was also shared by West Germany and Britain, and all three countries were today pleading the pressure of "current business" as the reason for postponement.

It has been known for some months in NATO circles that the Portuguese government is regarded as "shaky" as far as security is concerned.

The meeting a twice yearly discussion, would have had sensitive subjects on the agenda such as the targeting of tactical nuclear weapons.

There are four permanent members of the group: the United States, West Germany, Britain and Italy. There is a rota system for , irs of the other alliance members to sit in on the talks for 18 months at a time. The meeting would have been the beginning of such a stint by Portugal.

FASHION.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (IHT). Yves Saint Laurent will be on the Today show next Monday-but things will be a great deal different from, say, 10 years ago. Things have changed for fashion, Saint Laurent and Barbara Walters, coanchor man of the TV program.

"Remember when we used to come to Paris and the conturiers treated us so badly," Miss Walters said. They'd never heard of us or the Today show.

Now, the coast-to-coast news and features program, which has 10 million viewers, is the oldest and most famous of its kind. As for Barbara Walters, she has become a celebrity. Ber Today guestlist includes Henry Kissinger, Moshe Dayan, Sen. Edward Kennedy, Prince Philip, Truman Capote, not to mention ex-President Richard Nixon.

But fashion has been going downhill, as far as the program is concerned. "We used to do fashion shows every week." she said. "We don't any more. We're news oriented and there isn't as much news in fashion as there

> Despite it all, "Fashion is a big pull," Miss Walters said. "Everybody says they're not interested but everybody watches including the men. But one has to be careful. For instance we never use the words 'chic,' 'amusing,' 'nifty.' God help us, I'd never use 'nifty,' 'daring,' or the little black dress.' We try to give prices and if we're showing very expensive clothes, which magazines show all the time, we explain how those clothes are going to be made at reasonable

That is because there has en a lot more promotion of American designers who also do much more practical lines than their European counterparts. "Sportswear and separates most important for us and the whole philosophy of fashion has changed. Fashion, as such, is out. We now spend more money on our homes, we care more about our sheets than a new shirt. We feel we don't have to buy tons of clothes.

"I have nice clothes. But I spend less on my clothes and have fewer clothes than five years ago. The whole look is sportier, more comfortable and less distinctive. Nobody wants to stand out too much, except on a formal occasion. "That's why our so-called couture is dying. The big designers are being carried by their boutloues and their sportswear. Then Miss Walters summed up the Today approach to fashion which should give all fashion writers something to think about.

'I think that fashion is important to women," she said "They do care about the way they look, they do want a new sweater, a new cape. But they don't want to spend a lot of money, even the rich ones. They don't care about designers names or the French label. The whole idea of treating fashion is to make it accessible to the general public. .It's not that people don't care but they resent it. Repeated abortion is a matter of concern," says Dr. Jean Pakter, directer of the New York City Health Department's Bureau of Maternity Services and Family Planning. We hope to renew and concentrate our efforts further research into the characteristics of abortion repeaters so we can pinpoint our information directly to them.

While we are concerned about abortion repeaters, we are not at the point where we are going to 'After two abortions, that's

Another View

Another, less stringent view comes from Dr. Christopher Tletze, senior consultant with the Population Council and director of its abortion research sctivities, who says, "The number of women having repeat abortions is small compared to the entire population of women. The small percentage of abortion repeaters corresponds fairly well to the high level of contraceptive effectiveness."

After a recent analysis relating to the likelihood of repeat abortion, Dr. Tietze believes that the percentage of repeat abortions to be expected among young women on the pill in the year following their first legal abortion is be-tween 18 and 53 per cent. (The pill is 98 to 99 per cent effective.) For those using less effective con-traceptive methods, 9 to 24 per cent will return for a second abortion in the year after the first one, he estimates.

In the publication Family Planning Perspectives, Dr. Tierze predicts an ever-increasing num-ber of repeat abortions, "Within 10 years," he writes, "approximatchildbearing period, 29 to 50 per cent of pill users and a substantial majority of users of other methods may be expected to experience at lear one repeat

The development is part of the in reasing acceptance of both marriage and family counseling as aids in solving problems. Although family services no longer have such long waiting lists as they had in the past, spokesmen point out that "resources have increased tremendously in the last decade."

"People today are looking at their problems in a different way," said Judith Lieb, executive director of the Nathan W. Ackerman Family Institute, which specializes in family psychotherapy. Although confusion about role identity was rarely given as the "precipitating" problem when a couple or family sought help, many counselors observe that, after initial discussions, changing mores were clearly bothering a number of men and, in many cases, women as well.

Standby Problems "The standby problems are stili communication, relationships with children and relatives, money and sex," said Dr. lideurs Murilio-Rohde, "The presenting problem may be, 'We are fighting' or, 'We can't get along,' or don't commun there is no question that women are demanding more."

U.S. Auto Makers Cut Output Plans U.S. auto makers, reacting quickly to the renewed shamp in new-car sales, have cut their planned new-car production in domestic assembly plants next month to levels about 19 per cent below a year earlier. Sources warned that further production cutbacks—possibly hig ones—are likely to drive final quarter output even lower later this year, as auto makers review their deteriorating sales and soaring inventory position on a daily basis.

Productivity Drops in U.S.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30 (AP). -Productivity dropped sharply in the third quarter while labor costs continued to soar, further adding to inflationary pressures, the gov-ernment reported today.

The Labor Department said productivity in the July-September period declined at a 3-percent, seasonally-adjusted annual rate, reflecting a 2.3-per-cent drop in output and a three-tenths of 1-per-cent decline in man-hours. Productivity—that is, output per man-hour-has now dropped in five of the last seven quarters. It fell 7.1 per cent in the first quarter of the year and edged up six-tenths of a per cent in the second quarter. The government said the thirdquarter decline in output reflected a larger decline than in manhours, resulting from a shortening of the average workweek, which was down 1.1 per cent. Compensation per man-hour, security and other fringe benefits, rose 10.5 per cent during the third quarter. This compared with a rise of 14.2 per cent in the previous quarter. The government said the increased compensation, combined which reflects wage costs as well as employer contributions to social

Despite the increase in compensation, real compensation per man-hour-that is, pay per manhour adjusted for inflationdecreased 23 per cent in the

At Bankers Trust Paris, we are a small team of bankers, trained in international markets, on the look out for the services our bank can offer you. In France or any other part of the world.

We are bankers capable of sharing your enthusiasm for your projects, of suggesting formulas best adapted to your development in France or abroad: we can provide such services as local or euro financing, buyers' or sellers' credits, foreign exchange, discovery of far away markets.

Bankers capable also of stopping you in time, if advisable, before putting in motion the banking institution without which, it must be admitted, there would be neither business nor bankers.

An Autobiography

By Angela Yvonne Davis. A Bernard Geis Associates Book. Random House. 400 pp. $8.95.

reading "Angela Davis," the autobiography of the black militant who is probably best known for her fights with the California Board of Regents over whether or not she could teach philosophy at the University of California San Diego (she couldn't), and with the people of California over whether or not she was involved in the famous Marin County courthouse shootout (she wasn't)

The book is a straightforward account that begins with the events leading up to Miss Davis's arrest in October, 1970, then cuts back to her childhood in Birmingham, Als., and the proc chronologically through the 28 years of her life to the climax of the trial that eventually led to her acquittal. And as such it supplies any number of clarifying details about Miss Davis's uphringing and education (she attended Elizabeth Irwin High School in New York through an American Friends Service Committee program; Brandels University on a scholarship; the Sor-bonne on the Hamilton College junior-year-in-France program; and Frankfurt University in Ger-many on the advice of Herbert Marcuse); about her involvement in the black liberation movement and the Communist party; and about her much-publicized arrest, incarceration and trial What's more, unlike her theoretical writings—some of which appeared in a collection Miss Davis helped to edit called "If They Come in the Morning"— the autobiography seems to be direct, simple and relatively personal in style. So presumably we are afforded a glimpse at the author's character. And though Miss Davis says in her preface that she is losth to "individualize" herself-is reluctant to distinguish herself from "the millions of my people" whose lives "the very same forces . . . have shaped and misshaped"—it is hard to resist feeling curious about her as an individual. For she appears so unusually intelligent, articulate and well-grounded in her beliefs that one almost instinctively looks to her for explanations one wouldn't expect from others of the same militancy and political persuasion

As it turns out on closer reading, however, her character isn't cially conducive to the autobiographical mode. She is successful in not "individualizing" herself. Whatever she does and wherever she goes, she feels drawn "Janus-like" between herself and the general plight of her people. So she never permits herself a moment of spontaneity, never admits to an instance of personal conflict or indecision never tells us a thing that hasn't been prefabricated to contribute to her ultimate political devel-

Indeed she doesn't even tell us very much about what did contribute to her political develop-

AT first glance there seem to ment: She merely notes the most be several good reasons for obvious passages in explaining obvious passages in explaining why a high-school reading of "The Communist Manifesto hit me like a bolt of lightning" (of her subsequent years of studying philosophy, we learn nothing of substance. The only friends she mentions from her high-school years are those who became her "comrades in arms" in "a Marxist-Leninist youth organiza-tion with fraternal ties with the party."

More annoying are her off-thecuff political judgments. The fact that while visiting Berlin in 1963 she never had any trouble getting through Checkpoint Charlie, she concludes to be the German "way of Democratic Republic's showing their solidarity with black people." The idea that Cuba's Committee to Defend the Revolution is a spy organization she finds "obviously absurd, since the majority of the Cuban population belonged" to the group.

Finally-and this may well spring from the bias of a white person who has never suffered from bigotry in the American judicial system—one finds it difficult to accept Miss Davis's conclusion that she was a "political prisoner whom millions of people from throughout the world rescued from persecution and death." Doubtless she was a political prisoner, but in fact, according to her own accomt, it was finally the men and women of the jury, conforming to specific rules of justice, who found her not guilty as charged. Of course, one understands that according to Miss Davis's ideology these people were merely automata twitching in response to large material forces, Still, her accounting makes it look as though they twitched ac-cording to their consciences, And judging from the way she addressed her defense to these men and women Miss Davis knew all along that they would

There are no rules that offer guidance in bidding a 10-card suit when the opponents have opened the bidding. There are two objectives: to become declarer at almost any - t and to create problems for the opposition in finding their best contract. The odds were slightly against East being able to take a trick in defense, even if he was on lead. In stinck he would expect to take 10 bricks, plus the number of aces his partner happened to hold. A jump to five clubs over one spade was unlikely to buy the contract, so a jump all the way to the six-level came into serious consideration. At the other extreme was a cumin pass with the intention of bidding later.

East's actual choice was a jump to three clubs, which had little to recommend it. South scraped up a hid of three spades, locating the 10-card fit for the partnership. That was all the encouragement North needed to bid a slam, and he raised immediately to six ബക്ഷ് .

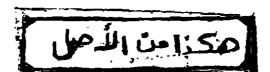

This put East's judgment to the test, and he failed North's direct slam bid, without using Blackwood, made it highly likely that he was void in clubs. So the defensive prospects were poor-clubs, East passed, and pas again when his partner doubl. And the slam was unbeatable , any lead, since the extra dismon winner in the dummy took care of the potential heart loser after the trumps were drawn. So North-South emerged with a profit of 1,660, instead of the modest 350, allowing for honors, that they would have scored against seven clubs doubled. In his three title bouts, Foreman had needed only 11 minutes 35 seconds in dethroning Frazier and successfully defending his crown against Joe (King) Roman and Norton, but in the ring under a canopy in the Zaire capital's soccer stadium, he was unable to pound All into submission with the same punches that had de-molished the other three.

At the opening bell, Foreman moved clumsily but quickly. He appeared to slow All with a long left hook to the body near the end of the first round. He also pinned Ali to the ropes and slammed punches with both hands to the rio cage. Ali covered up effectively. When the round ended, Ali sat on his stool and winked across the ring.

When the round started, Foreman again chased Ali, pinning him against the ropes. But suddenly Ali retaliated with a flurry of jabs. Midway in this round. Ali appeared to wobble and he grabbed Foreman's shoulder momentarily. But quickly he swung a right cross and several jabs. During the third, Ali was content to lay on the top rope and permit Foreman to pummel him ilmost at will. But every so often, the old bee would sting the young lion with jabs that snapped back Foreman's head.

Early Fatigue

In the fourth, Ali opened with a quick flurry of jabs that jarred Foreman's head. But still Ali was content to lay on the ropes again. Foreman's legs appeared weary as he walked after Ali and often lunged ineffectively.

When the fifth began, Ali maintained his strange tactics. Other boxers had been toppled quickly by Foreman's sledge-hammer punches but Ali obviously had prepared himself well for this task. There was no obvious sign of the punishment. During the intermission before Dundee hurried across the ring apron to where a Zairois boxing official was trying to tighten the turnbuckle to control the top rope that Ali had been laying against. But instead of tightening it, the Zairois official was loosening it.

The rope sagged.

All avoided those ropes during the sixth. And in avoiding the ropes, he moved more than he had done before in jabbing Fore-man effectively and often.

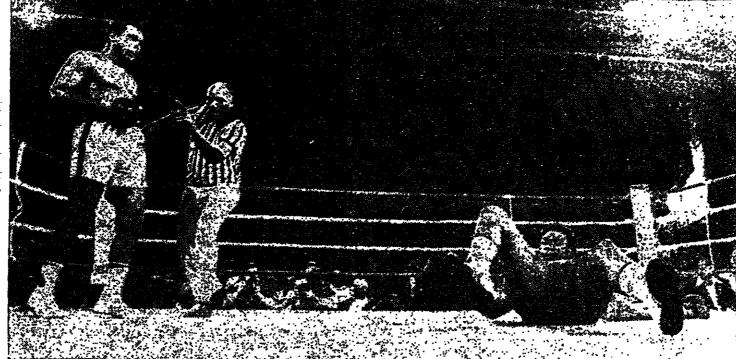

Stumbling along, Foreman chased Ali throughout the seventh, but his face began to swell, espe-cially around the right eye that had been cut in training causing a six-week postponement. Foreman was hoping to measure Ali in the eighth for the big punch that had finished 24 consecutive opponents but his arms were powerless.

Suddenly, with the left-right combination, Ali produced the knockout as Foreman barely missed beating the count of 10. Moments later, perhaps overcome with emotion, Ali sat down in the ring for several moments as his idolators swarmed onto the canvas to surround him. Zairois police and paratroopers needed several minutes to clear the confusion. Not long after that the dawn broke here. But soon a heavy rainstorm crashed over the sta-

Judge Says Count Went Too Quickly

KINSHASA, Zaire, Oct. 30 (UPI).—One of the two judges of the George Foreman-Muhammad All fight said today he thought American referee Zack Clayton had been a little too fast in counting Foreman out.

"I do not want to criticize a colleague in a difficult job," said judge Nouriddine Adalla of Tunisia; 'but I think the count did go a little too fast. I think he may have picked up the count about two seconds off."

Clayton and the other judge, American James Taylor, left here less than five hours after the fight and were not available for The judge's and referee's score cards were not announced. Adalla said he had Ali three points ahead when the knockout came in the eighth round.

"I had four rounds even and three for All." Adalia said. "The other two also had Ali three points ahead but one of I forget which, had Foreman winning one round and Ali winning four. He was the only one who gave Foreman a round,

Dick Sadier, Foreman's manag er, said he was perfectly satisfied about the way the match was refereed and had no complaints about the count.

Champ Alters Plan And Doesn't Dance

By John Vinocur

LINSHASA, Zaire, Oct. 30 (AP). - The winner fumed and complained, and looked as angry as a vindicated man can when he's proved - with a vengeful

The loser talked gently, mildly, reasonably.

-that he's been right all

The roles were o'd and wouldn't have been reversed had the fight ended differently. Muhammad Ali, champion: again, couldn't find anything nice say about George Foreman. And Foreman couldn't dig up anything mean to say against Ali. No skill, scared, doesn't like to get hit, a phony champ who punches like a sissy, a bully who was built up by know-nothing writers-Ali had those words to describe Foreman. And these: "He was scared; he was humiliated. I did it. I said I'd do it, but did you listen? I said I'd stick him and that he didn't like to ge, hit and that I'm the greatest heavyweight of all time, but did you listen? "I didn't dance. I wanted to make him lose his power. He punched like a sissy. I stayed on the ropes. Staying on the ropes is a beautiful thing for a fighter. You think when I'm on the ropes I'm uoing bad."

Ali, who surprised Foreman by not dencing, said it was his idea not to box on his toes. He said that he thought he discouraged Foreman during the fight by continuously talking to him, telling him, "Come on, take your best shot. Come on, hit hard. Here'- the body, hit hard. You're an amateur. Show me something. You're the champion.

Ali added: "What you saw wasn't my work. It wasn't me because I don't have a punch. Me knocking out George? That ain't me, that's Allab." Ali looked incredibly peeved in victory. He had told everyone how hard he had trained, how he had hit the heavy bag again and how Foreman was a "mummy." But no one wanted to bet on him, it seemed, and all the talk was about Foreman's awesome power,

Foreman had nothing angry to say at all, and his voice was calm as he talked with reporters. His sentiments tinkled while Ali's "Nobody lost," Foreman said, pushing the facts a little. "We have built some real bridges here. When the competition is clean there is never a loser. If there is a good fight, there's no loser."

Foreman, humbled, with tears in his eyes after his first setback, admitted he didn't follow the "good advice" in his corner. He said his trainer. Dick Sadler, had told him to go for the midsection in the early going, and not to look for a quick knockout, and not to wear himself out. Foreman said he felt in control of the fight until the fifth round, when he suddenly tired. Foreman even had some incredible praise for the man who ridiculed him. Of Ali, who rolled his eyes weirdly and mouthed a curse after the playing of the Star-Spangled Banner, Foreman said, "He's a true American, a great gentleman and a cham-pion." Then he added, "If you don't have anything good to say about somebody, then you shouldn't -ny anything at all."

KINSHASA, Zaire, Oct. 30 (AP) .- Dick Sadler, George Foreman's manager, said . jay that Muhammad Ali defeated his fighter with the theory, "if you ain't gonna do nothing, I'll do something, baby."

Sadler's analysis of Foreman's irreat was that the fight turned not on what Ali did, but on what Foreman failed to do.

"He just walked right out to the man. He just stayed there. He just stayed there, he didn't try to get away from him," Sadler

Ali brought no surprises with him, Sadler maintained, saying that all Alie talk shout dancing him to death was meaningless. "Muhammad did what he always done. He backed up and lay on the ropes and put his hands up. When he does that he's blinded to the side like a horse with blinkers. But George didn't work the blind angles.

"Now, they always said George was a pusher, a brutal man, but he didn't push at all. He was trained and knew what to do, but it didn't happen." Foreman spent until the mid-

"You'd say something and George would say yes, and then the next round there was some thing new," Moore said. "We were always a minute behind." Moore hinted that Foreman may have had some disregard for Ali's punch. When he was asked if Foreman didn't seem to be willing to take punches from Ali, Moore said. "I told him he hit hard. People write that he isn't a slugger,

Francis Brinsley Le Poer Trench. "People did tend to poke a bit of fun at me. But they don't much anymore. The young people, especially, don't." The diffident British voice, a little indistinct on the trans-Channel phone line, held a note of

Not, mind you, that they were amused by his name, which is an ancient and honored one. Mr. Le Poer Trench's family name is Cromarty—he is a half-brother of the seventh Earl of Cromarty and is heir to the title, which dates from 1803. The Trenches, a family of French origin, take their name from the seigneurie of La Tranche, in Poitou, of which they were once The name has a special aptness for the present heir

He is the author of "Secret of the Ages," a book just published in London by Souvenir Press. Mr. Le Poer Trench is "a ufologist"—prehaps the ufologist. You don't meet them every day. He explained, in the course of a lengthy telephone interview, that the word is a comage from UFO—which of course means unidentified flying object. Mr. Le Poer Trench, having spent most of the last 25 years on the UFO trail, might even, if he chose, simply call himself a "fologist." He's pretty well eliminated the "U" from UFO.

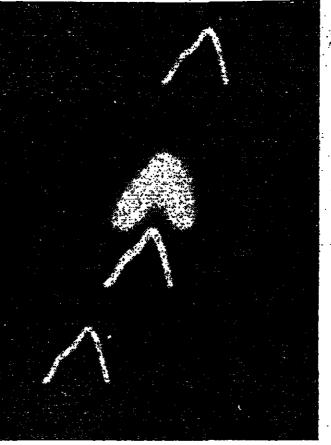

The author of six previous books on the same subject, he feels that this time he has really got their number. He knows what they are, he said confidently, and he knows where they come from; the real revelation is contained in the second part. The "Secret of the Ages," according to Mr. Le Poer Trench, is that UFOs or flying saucers are space ships, all right, but not from outer space: from inside the earth. (Mr. Le Poer Trench should not be confused with a fellow Britan, J. R. R. Tolkien, proprietor of the "Middle Earth" and father of the Hobbits.)

Warming to his subject, he began a quiet but heartfelt explanation of his latest UFO theories. (He said, in answer to a question, that he has had no scientific training but is merely an enthusiastic layman, who writes in layman's language about a subject that has intrigued millions of people for at least a

"You see, you've got to understand, first of all," he said, "that the earth is hollow." He had believed for most of his life, he said, that the earth's core was a molten mass of gaseous lava-like material. But a scientific friend set him straight and having organized a worldwide UFO-watching corps and an international UFO bi-monthly journal, he began writing his books, finally evolving the theories set forth in "Secret of the

The earth's interior, according to Mr. Le Poer Trench, is crisscrossed with a complex network of tunnels. This is where the UFOs-i.e., space ships-are kept when not in action, cruising silently over the world, frightening people by blinking their lights, occasionally even landing. How did the tunnels get there?

"They were built by the people of Atlantis." The line was clear, the cool and measured British voice matter-of-fact. What happened, you see, was this: The legendary island of the "Western sea," described, among others, by Plato, in two of his dialogues, was indeed destroyed—"around 9500 BC"—but its inhabitants had, as a precaution, built a safety hatch—the tunnel system—"to protect themselves from seismic disturbances and extraterrestrials." When permanent destruction of Atlantis was imminent, they retreated to the tunnels.

The tunnel system, he went on has two entrances and "is 1,500 miles in circumference." You can see these entrances, he said, "In satellite photographs." These—some of which illustrate his new book-were obtained not from NASA but "another official American agency."

The space ships of the Atlantians, when they leave middle earth to go aloft, are indeed "watching us," as lots of people have suspected, Mr. Le Poer Trench said. Why? Well, to see that we don't do anything that would endanger their civilizawhich, after all, they've managed to preserve for almost 10,000 years inside the earth, not counting the period before Atlantis was mundated. Had he himself ever seen a UFO? Only once," Mr. Le Poer Trench said. It was during a vacation in the French provinces and he called it to the attention of two American boys who were there. "It winked its lights at us' and went away.

Having finally solved the UFO commdrum to his own satisfaction, Mr. Le Poer Trench is far from happy about them, though his disposition seems in general to be one of buoyancy. He is convinced that they convey a warning to our world. "It's an odd thing," he said. "Whenever there's a UFO sighting, anywhere in the world, there are always strange men on the scene before anyone else has heard about it. Foreign-looking men. Taking pictures, things like that ... And then, of there are the Men in Black." The men...?

"They turn up all over the world, too. Anywhere that people have been poking too deeply into the UFO question." The Men in Black, he said, call on you and leave the clear impression that the smart thing would be to bugger off.

Mr. Le Poer Trench began writing his books in the early 1960s, and they have sold briskly since the start. Recently, at 63, he married for the third time. He and his bride occupy adjoining apartments in the Mayfair district of London. Not long ago he quit his job to devote all of his time to writing about UFOs, and a new book is in the works. He used to write for a gardening magazine. He always, you might say, had an ear to the ground.

The Price of a Divorce $2.261 Million in Alin

Broadcasting executive George Storer, 74, of Miami, says that he will appeal a $2.261-million alimony order, one of the largest divorce settlements of its kind, Dorothy Storer, 73, who was his third wife, said she will not settle for less no matter how long the case drags on. Dade County Circuit Court Judge Alan Schwertz ordered Storer to give his former wife $19,000 a month for 119 months, pay her attorney $200,000 and court costs of $10,963. He also gave Mrs. Storer possession of the couple's $750,000 home. The "style of living to which these parties accustomed themselves boggles the mind," said Judge Schwartz. Storer's attorney's pegged his net worth at $31.6

Prince Charles, 25, heir to the British throne, finds all the publicity about his girlfriends slightly irritating. "It can make things very difficult," he said during a TV interview following his tour of Australia.

Police in Buenos Aires have confirmed that world middleweight boxing champion Carlos Monxon of Argentina was detained by them for nine hours Sunday, charged with injuring his 28-yearold wife, Beatriz Garcia de Monzon. She told reporters that Monzon beat her up at a birthday party for their 11-year-old son when she challenged him about his relationship with actress Susana Gilmenes, with whom he made his first film, "La Mary." She said that a wound over her right eyebrow took eight stitches to close. "I have told Carlos already that I do not want to live with him."
